

SC Line shipping company enters the new era linking USA with Cuba

SC Line calls Cuba every 14 days, sailing from Port Everglades (Florida) and arriving in Mariel and Santiago de Cuba.

Last Sunday (September 20th) was not any given Sunday. The Florida based shipping company SC Line stepped into a new era not only for the Cuba-USA relationship but also for the world wide order. The Caroline Russ motor vessel berthed at the Mariel port in the first commercial voyage (USA – Cuba) of this new status quo.

SC Line is a company that has being leading for more than a decade several trades linking the most important places of the Caribbean & Latin America with the United States. SC handles Ro-Ro, static, breakbulk or containerized cargo (reefers, as well) with the most efficient, agile and competitive service & customer service experience in the market.

This new service offered by SC Line is the evident proof of the successful efforts that both Governments have been doing for the last months. This was one of the biggest challenges for both sides. Together, they are designing and building a brand new scenario. SC Line will be a strong and reliable partner for both countries with a main goal: to strengthen and enrich relations between Cuba and the United States of America.
